

ABSTRACT

A system interface having: a packet switching network, a cache memory; and a plurality of directors. One portion of such directors is adapted for coupling to a host computer/server and another portion of the directors is adapted for coupling to a bank of disk drives. The plurality of directors and cache memory are interconnected through the packet switching network.

5